4. CONCLUSION AND RECOMMENDATIONS

4.1 Conclusion

World Environment Day (WED) is an important occasion to spread awareness on environmental sustainability and recognize the problems related to climate change, and inspire decision makers to make positive actions. The most important goal of WED 2017 under the theme "Connecting People to Nature"/”Duhuze Umuntu n’Ibidukikije, Ni byo Shingiro ry’Ubuzima was to raise awareness on connecting with nature through advocating for building green cities, villages and public places and reducing vulnerability to Climate change. NEW 2017 related activities included ecosystem and forest restoration, encouraging Rwandese to visit the National Parks and other ecotourism places and promoting made in Rwanda through exhibition to appreciate the beauty of the products made from our natural resources and discover our culture best practices linked the nature.

In Rwanda, all planned activities related to WED 2017 theme were in general successfully implemented during the National Environment week in all Districts. Those activities have to continue and not stop with WED celebration. As mentioned by different authorities during WED 2017 celebration, Rwanda’s economy and livelihoods depend on natural resources while many natural ecosystems are threatened by human activity and the climate change effect.

REMA will keep efforts to oversee and stimulate all economic sector of our Country in promoting the ban of plastic bags and the use of alternative bags.

REMA is grateful for everybody’s contribution during the National Environment Week and the World Environment Day 2017 celebration. Through engaging collective efforts of all stakeholders in connecting to nature toward with resource efficiency and low carbon emission, we will preserve nature, while achieving growth, and climate resilience.

4.2 Recommendations

From WED 2017 celebration based on WED 2017 theme, we can highlight the following recommendations:

- Each one of us should contribute to increase resilience to climate change starting at that our household, community, village and Country.

- During the exhibition to mark WED 2017 celebration, Private Sector demonstrated their ability to act as key catalysts for green innovations and connecting people to nature. Therefore, there is a need to keep organizing annual exhibitions and environmental awards to engage the private sector and civil society in green economy.
- Our Country has made good achievement in environmental conservation and protection through different program and strategies. Rwandans are urged to keep building upon the success made in environmental management towards green growth and climate change resilience.

- Effort should be made in relocating illegal infrastructure located in wetlands to restore their ecosystem services and reducing biodiversity loss.

- In this report, the report from Districts on NEW and WED 2017 activities is not exhaustive. Districts are requested to share WED progress reports to learn good practices.
